New York, July 2, 2012 — Hughes Hubbard & Reed announced today that New York-based partner John Fellas has been appointed co-chair of the firm's Arbitration and Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) practice group. Fellas will co-chair the award-winning practice with Washington, DC-based partner John Townsend and Paris-based partner José Rosell.

"The promotion of John Fellas to co-chair of Hughes Hubbard's Arbitration and ADR practice group constitutes a recognition of the high profile that John has achieved outside of the firm and of the leadership that he has been providing for some time within our arbitration practice," said Townsend.

"Our practice has grown because many of the world's leading enterprises turn to us to handle their most critical matters, including commercial arbitration and investment arbitration," added Rosell. "The addition of John Fellas as co-chair alongside John Townsend and me reflects the growth of a practice group that has been recognized by Chambers and similar publications as one of the foremost arbitration practices in the world."

"My partners and I are privileged to work with clients on their most sophisticated international arbitrations," Fellas said. "I am honored by this appointment and look forward to serving alongside John and José as co-chair of one of the world's most esteemed practices in our field."
